

Please read the following two letters carefully ( Pages 2 and 3 of this file ) , then upon your agreement with their content please fill in the fields provided with your Name, Address, Date, Month and year, to do this simply move your mouse pointer over an area instructing you to insert data and left click 3 times and start typing, once printed sign and send, it is as simple as that.

Thank you for your support.

Kind Regards.

Inwood.

From:

Beverley Hughes
Department for Children, Schools and Families,
Sanctuary Buildings,
Great Smith Street,
LONDON
SW1P 3BT

Dear Beverley

I am writing to you with grave concerns regarding a recent report I have read relating to Child Exploitation, and how the internet is being used as a means of grooming children for sexual activity, this report can be found at the following web address: <http://www.inwood.org.uk>.

I think that it is completely outrageous in a day and age where there has been huge advances in technology, that the one issue that is most threatening to the safety of any child, is being performed on a massive scale right beneath our noses.

Advances in Mobile Phone Technology is making it possible for the internet to be accessible 24/7 from literally anywhere, and a Mobile Phone capable of doing so would be a very affordable Birthday or Christmas present , and yet I see no evidence here that the internet is a safe place for any child to be, especially on their own.

I have been given very clear reasons to believe that some Adult Content being published on the internet, is available to view in any controlled environment even with Content Control Activated and Safe Mode Filtering On, even in places such as Internet Cafes and Public Libraries, but perhaps more importantly, the description given of the layouts to these sites suggests that they have been designed to appeal to the eyes of children.

It is my understanding, that it is currently optional for any web-site to report its own content for tagging purposes, so that their service or their content does not appear in any search made in Safe Mode, and yet there are millions of sites with very hardcore Adult Content which avoid filtering, and through seemingly very high legitimate adult usage they rate very high in many child related topics displayed in Safe Mode.

It would seem that there is a perfectly legitimate means of preventing this, therefore I believe that it is now in the Public Interest that the following should now apply; All Adult Content for the purpose of Public Display via the internet, should be Tagged and instantly recognisable by all Internet Browsers and Search Engines as is currently optional, all open / user consent gateways to Adult Content should comply under Child Protection Law, Organisations approved by the EU and the Commonwealth should then utilise existing affordable technology i.e. Webots, to detect illegal Tag-less gateways to Adult Content without further public intervention

Thank you.

Yours Sincerely.

From:

Directorate General
"Justice, Freedom and Security",
EUROPEAN COMMISSION
D.G. Justice, Freedom and Security,
B-1049 BRUSSELS

Dear Sir

I am writing to you with grave concerns regarding a recent report I have read relating to Child Exploitation, and how the internet is being used as a means of grooming children for sexual activity, this report can be found at the following web address: <http://www.inwood.org.uk>.

I think that it is completely outrageous in a day and age where there has been huge advances in technology, that the one issue that is most threatening to the safety of any child, is being performed on a massive scale right beneath our noses.

Advances in Mobile Phone Technology is making it possible for the internet to be accessible 24/7 from literally anywhere, and a Mobile Phone capable of doing so would be a very affordable Birthday or Christmas present , and yet I see no evidence here that the internet is a safe place for any child to be, especially on their own.

I have been given very clear reasons to believe that some Adult Content being published on the internet, is available to view in any controlled environment even with Content Control Activated and Safe Mode Filtering On, even in places such as Internet Cafes and Public Libraries, but perhaps more importantly, the description given of the layouts to these sites suggests that they have been designed to appeal to the eyes of children.

It is my understanding, that it is currently optional for any web-site to report its own content for tagging purposes, so that their service or their content does not appear in any search made in Safe Mode, and yet there are millions of sites with very hardcore Adult Content which avoid filtering, and through seemingly very high legitimate adult usage they rate very high in many child related topics displayed in Safe Mode.

It would seem that there is a perfectly legitimate means of preventing this, therefore I believe that it is now in the Public Interest that the following should now apply; All Adult Content for the purpose of Public Display via the internet, should be Tagged and instantly recognisable by all Internet Browsers and Search Engines as is currently optional, all open / user consent gateways to Adult Content should comply under Child Protection Law, Organisations approved by the EU and the Commonwealth should then utilise existing affordable technology i.e. Webots, to detect illegal Tag-less gateways to Adult Content without further public intervention

Thank you.

Yours Sincerely.